

Council of Science Editors

Dear CSE Partners,

We are incredibly grateful for your continued support and the impact we make together. Today, we're thrilled to share our Fall 2026 – Spring 2027 Partnership Prospectus.

Inside, you'll find a suite of offerings to choose from, based on your organization's business objectives—from impactful digital promotion to small-group networking experiences.

Also, we heard you! This year, we are sharing the prospectus with you early so that your team has time to build its offerings into your upcoming marketing and budgeting plans.

Let us know which opportunities spark your interest!

Warmly,

Elizabeth Yopez and Stephanie Valladao
Co-Chairs of the Sponsorship Committee

WHO IS CSE?

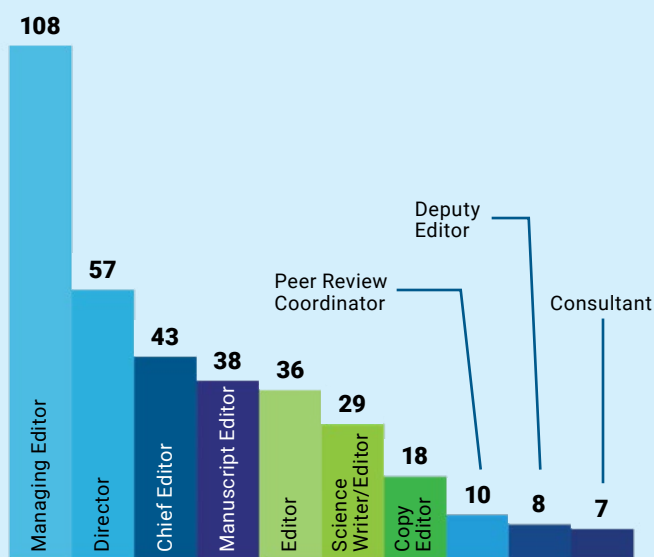

The Council of Science Editors (CSE) is an international organization of over 700 editorial professionals across scientific and humanities publishing. Its aim is to be an authoritative resource, fostering professional development, networking, and the exchange of information on current issues in scientific communication.

MISSION STATEMENT

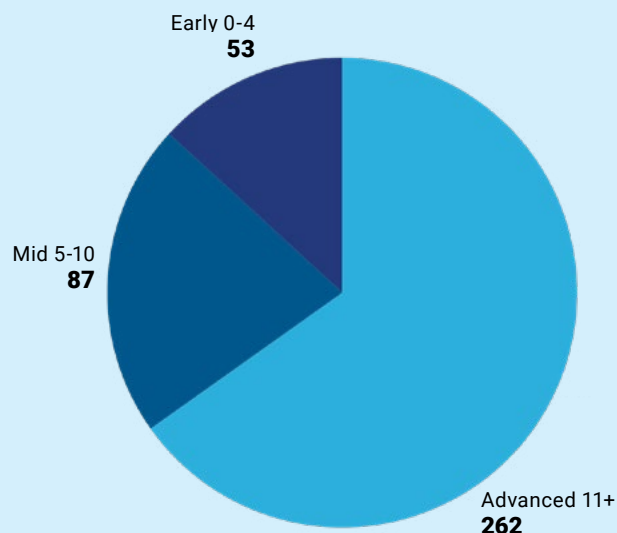

To serve editorial professionals in the sciences by providing a network for career development, education, and resources for best practices.

2026 Fall Symposium

Sustaining Trust: Advancing Integrity, Innovation, and Collaboration in Scientific Communication

Join us for CSE's annual two-day Virtual Fall Symposium! Bringing together timely, forward-looking discussions on the future of scholarly publishing, topics range from managing agentic AI and rethinking research outputs to reforming incentive systems and communicating the value of our work. More than just a conversation, this symposium is built to be both educational and practical. Across sessions, participants will explore how editors, publishers, societies, institutions, and researchers can work together to foster innovation, maintain a strong reputation, and also uphold transparency, accountability, rigor, and trust in science.
