

◆ 2001-2002 Council of Science Editors Board

Tom Lang, of Tom Lang Communications, was installed on 6 May as president of the Council of Science Editors for the 2001-2002 term. Lang, who joined the Council in 1993, has contributed extensively over the years to annual meetings, other Council activities, and Science Editor and its predecessor, CBE Views. He was program chair in 2000-2001.

Newly Elected

Michael Held, president of Rockefeller University Press, has been elected CSE vice president for 2001-2002. A CSE member since 1990, he was CSE treasurer and chair of the Finance Committee from 1997 until becoming vice president. He also has served on other Council committees and has spoken at various annual meetings, workshops, and retreats.

Michael Held

Diane Scott-Lichter has been elected a director of CSE. An associate publisher at Elsevier Science, she has chaired the Sponsorship Committee and the Program Committee and served on other Council committees. She also has served as a speaker, panelist, and reporter at various annual meetings since joining the Council in 1987.

Diane Scott-Lichter

Continuing on the Board

Annette Flanagin, of the Journal of the American Medical Association, has ascended from vice president to president-elect.

Cheryl Iverson, division director of the Editorial Processing Group of American Medical Association Scientific Publications and Multimedia Applications, continues as secretary.

Paul Bozuwa has ascended from treasurer-elect to treasurer with Held's assumption of the vice presidency. Bozuwa is president and chief operating officer of Capital City Press.

Monica Bradford, previously a director, is completing Bozuwa's term as treasurer-elect. Bradford is managing editor of Science.

Faith McLellan, North American senior editor of The Lancet, and Kayleen A Niyo, of Niyo Scientific Communications Inc, continue as directors.

Tad Parker, of The Sheridan Group and Odyssey Press, remains on the board as immediate past president.