

◆ 2002-2003 Council of Science Editors Board

Annette Flanagin was installed on 5 May as president of the Council of Science Editors for the 2002-2003 term. Flanagin, a CSE member since 1989, has held a variety of leadership roles in the Council. She is managing senior editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association (JAMA) and director, JAMA programs, international activities, and editorial processing.

Annette Flanagin

Education Committee and Program Committee and been program coordinator for several Council retreats. She also has been a director of CSE and a speaker at annual meetings.

Stephen Prudhomme is the new treasurer-elect. Prudhomme, director of scientific publishing, American Heart Association, has been a Council member since 1990. He contributed a chapter to the Council publication Financial Management of Scientific Journals.

Stephen Prudhomme

Leesa Bruce has been elected a director of CSE. A Council member since 1990, she chaired the Publications Committee from 1997 to 2000. She also has served as a speaker and reporter at several annual meetings. Bruce is senior director, publications, Canadian Pharmacists Association.

Leesa Bruce

Continuing on the Board

Michael Held, president of Rockefeller University Press, has ascended from vice president to president-elect.

Cheryl Iverson, managing editor of the AMA Archives journals, continues as secretary.

Paul Bozuwa, president and chief operating officer of Capital City Press, continues as treasurer.

Diane Scott-Lichter, director of publishing strategy at the American Cancer Society, and Kayleen Niyo, of Niyo Scientific Communications Inc, continue as directors.

Tom Lang, of Tom Lang Communications, remains on the board as immediate past president.

Newly Elected Faith McLellan, North American senior editor, The Lancet, has been elected CSE vice president for 2002-2003. McLellan, who joined the Council in 1988, has chaired the

Faith McLellan